

Company's Loss of Financial Resources

Problem for Co-owners. If you co-own your company and you, personally, are a principal source of financial funding (bond guarantees, line of credit guarantees, etc.) your death can put enormous pressure on your company to perform. There is a very real risk that third parties may refuse to lend or to make guaranties on behalf of your company.

Problem for Sole Owners. Unless you can replace the financial strength, represented by your financial statement, your sudden death or incapacity may cause other "stakeholders" in your company to reconsider their relationships to your company. For example, if you have personally guaranteed the company's line of credit or permanent financing, expect your bank to reexamine its lending relationship. If you have used your financial statement to obtain bonding, expect the bonding company to refuse to extend its services unless the financial statements of those left behind are as strong as yours. Similarly, the lessor of any leased space or equipment may be unwilling to renew leases without your successor owner's guarantee backed by his or her personal assets. Finally, remember that your pocket has probably long been the source for your company's capital needs over the years. Should you die or become disabled, exactly where will your company secure adequate and ongoing capitalization?

Solution for Sole Owners and Co-Owners. There are two ways to prepare for the loss of financial resources that your death will create for your company. First, you can use life insurance proceeds to fund the anticipated need. You must place enough cash in the company's coffers (upon your departure) to calm the nerves of your company's bankers, lessors and bonding companies. That amount of cash must also satisfy your company's need for on-going capitalization. In a co-owned business, a buy/sell agreement simply buys out the deceased owner's interest. It does not put one penny in the company's coffers. For that reason, few companies (whether solely or co-owned) survive an owner's death. Understand, however, that life insurance proceeds are only part of the solution. If your company is to succeed, long term, it needs more

Michael Wildeveld, CEPA, M&AMI,
CM&AP, CM&AA, CBI, CBB
michaelw@veldma.com

Veld Mergers & Acquisitions
www.veldma.com
1 Park Plaza, 600
Irvine, CA 92614
310-652-8066

than cash. It needs successor management, motivated by ownership or cash (both current and deferred). The only way to make sure that your business continues without you is to make sure that your business is more than just you. If your company is all about you, no amount of life insurance will cover your absence.

The information contained in this article is general in nature and is not legal, tax or financial advice. For information regarding your particular situation, contact an attorney or a tax or financial professional. The information in this newsletter is provided with the understanding that it does not render legal, accounting, tax or financial advice. In specific cases, clients should consult their legal, accounting, tax or financial professional. This article is not intended to give advice or to represent our firm as being qualified to give advice in all areas of professional services. Exit Planning is a discipline that typically requires the collaboration of multiple professional advisors. To the extent that our firm does not have the expertise required on a particular matter, we will always work closely with you to help you gain access to the resources and professional advice that you need.

This is an opt-in newsletter published by Business Enterprise Institute, Inc., and presented to you by our firm. We appreciate your interest.

Any examples provided are hypothetical and for illustrative purposes only. Examples include fictitious names and do not represent any particular person or entity.