

How Much Is All This Exit Planning Going To Cost?

Fictional owner, Dennis Bradenton, calls his accountant to ask her to help him transfer his company to his management team. No stranger to Exit Planning, his accountant assembled all of Dennis's advisors and launched a complete Exit Planning process. She began, not with an examination of how a transfer to Dennis's desired successor might work, but by having Dennis answer the first three Exit Planning Questions:

- When do you want to leave your business?
- How much money do you need when you leave your company?
- To whom do you want to transfer your company?

Dennis's Advisor Team (if properly trained and experienced in Exit Planning) could help to save him time, money, and grief. A typical Advisor Team usually consists of: an accountant, lawyer, financial advisor or insurance professional, and oftentimes, a business consultant, valuation specialist and some sort of transaction specialist (business broker or investment banker). Given this extensive list of professionals, how can assembling and using such a Team help save an owner either money or time? A natural question most owners ask is, "How much is all of this going to cost me?"

The answer is very simple. A well-trained Advisor Team should make you money, not cost you money. This is not to suggest that your attorney or accountant, for example, is going to pay you money or that you aren't going to end up paying for their services. But, compared to little or no planning, a carefully planned and implemented Exit Plan can result in income, gift and estate tax savings as well as a reduction in the risk of non-payment from the buyer.

Tax Savings

A correctly-designed Exit Plan yields the owner possible income, gift and estate tax savings. Finding those savings opportunities, however, is the work of more than one advisor. If Dennis wants to exploit the available tax savings, each of his advisors must contribute expertise from his or her particular discipline. Working

Michael Wildeveld, CEPA, M&AMI,
CM&AP, CM&AA, CBI, CBB
michaelw@veldma.com

Veld Mergers & Acquisitions
www.veldma.com
1 Park Plaza, 600
Irvine, CA 92614
310-652-8066

together in a coordinated fashion not only saves everyone time, prevents the chances of duplication and the possibility of overlooking important elements, it is the most efficient way to locate and exploit various tax saving opportunities.

Reduction of Risk

In addition to helping to reduce your taxes, an experienced Exit Planning Advisor Team can help minimize the tax impact on the buyer. Why does an owner care about a prospective buyer's tax savings? Remember that the more money a buyer saves in taxes, the more money he has to pay you your purchase price. Minimizing taxes, drafting airtight contracts (or promissory notes) and negotiating favorable deal terms all serve to help reduce the risk of not receiving full payment.

Cost Efficient

As noted above, when professionals work together as a team, everyone saves time and there is less chance for unnecessary (and expensive) duplication. In addition, many owners designate the professional who can perform most cost-effectively to coordinate the activities of the various advisors. Today's financial, legal and tax complexities demand that owners use multiple professionals to get the best possible result.

Additional Benefits

Some Exit Planning Advisor Teams include a business consultant when there is a need to grow the value of a business. These consultants not only help to add value to companies, they also can do so in ways that attract cash-rich third parties. Similarly, well-trained transaction intermediaries may orchestrate a negotiation process that can help to increase the money an owner receives at closing.

Your Choice: Soloists or an Ensemble?

Will advisors perform better for you when they act alone, or when working together as a team with the common goal of attaining your exit objectives? I hope the answer is obvious.

What might not be as obvious is how these different advisors (many of whom can be quite independent-minded and even jealous of their "turf") can be persuaded to work together. What holds them together? The answer is the creation of a written Exit Plan, founded on your exit objectives, to which each advisor must adhere. The Plan lays out the roadmap to an owner's chosen destination. This roadmap also clearly states the role of each advisor. All advisors know what is expected of them and the date by which each task must be performed. With this Plan in hand you, the business owner, control the tempo and the cost of your exit.

The information contained in this article is general in nature and is not legal, tax or financial advice. For information regarding your particular situation, contact an attorney or a tax or financial professional. The information in this newsletter is provided with the understanding that it does not render legal, accounting, tax or financial advice. In specific cases, clients should consult their legal, accounting, tax or financial professional. This article is not intended to give advice or to represent our firm as being qualified to give advice in all areas of professional services. Exit Planning is a discipline that typically requires the collaboration of multiple professional advisors. To the extent that our firm does not have the expertise required on a particular matter, we will always work closely with you to help you gain access to the resources and professional advice that you need.

This is an opt-in newsletter published by Business Enterprise Institute, Inc., and presented to you by our firm. We appreciate your interest.

Any examples provided are hypothetical and for illustrative purposes only. Examples include fictitious names and do not represent any particular person or entity.

©2022 Business Enterprise Institute, Inc. All rights reserved.